WORLD HISTORY IN THE MAKING

The people of the United States became world-conscious with the coming of this country into the world war. Ever since that time they have realized that the United States, with all of its so-called isolation, is connected with world affairs, and they have a deep interest today in those current events that are making history in all countries on the globe.

It is world history in the making that we are giving to our readers very week in our "Weekly News Review."

view," written by Edward W. Pickard.

This is an editorial interpretation of today's history-making events in our own country and throughout the world, of events that have an influence, directly or indirectly, on ourselves. It covers the kind of events that intelligent citizens talk about, that they wish to be informed about, so they may talk intelligently.

Edward W. Pickard, who prepares this feature for our columns, is one of the highly trained newspaper observers and writers of the nation. He has a background of many years of experience, of a very broad education, of personal contact with men and study in many foreign lands from his school and college days so has been a constant student of world history of the past, of world and national history in the making, of the men and events of our generation.

Mr. Pickard's foreign travels have but intensified his love for and appreciation of America. He is intensely American, and sees world events through the eyes of an American. He writes of events from the standpoint of their effect on our own land.

Our readers will find in this "Weekly News Review" a feature that is very much worthy of their careful reading each week. It will keep them closely in touch with the events of consequence, and they will find in it a sure foundation for any discussion they may have with their neighbors of the real and important news of each week.

NEGRO PRESS GIVEN CLEAN BILL OF HEALTH

Hampton Institute, Va., Oct. 31. — "Is the Negro press independent of outside control? Is it free to express itself without restraint?"

This was the first question asked by George S. Schuyler at the conclusion of his lecture in Odgen Hall, on "The Negro Press," October 27.

As if some such question was expected, Mr. Schuyler answered with his hesitation: "The Negro press is as free as the press of any other group anywhere. Even the poorest of the papers manage to keep going without surrendering any of their independence. Their editors invariably say what they think on any and all questions."

He explained that the advertising columns of these papers, like all others, are open to all legitimate advertisers; and that such papers may very properly accept any such advertising offered; but it does not allow or follow that because some friendly political or other group places advertising matter with these papers that the latter are controlled by the former. Mr. Schuyler put particular emphasis on the fact that if some of the phobes of the Negro press were not independent and, therefore, acceptable to their readers, they could not remain solvent.

Another question asked from the floor was whether there would be any field for persons who took professional courses in journalism. He found to take the role of a prophet, Mr. Schuyler said that he believed there would be such a field; and he gave as the reason for his view the fact that a number of such persons had been so trained were actually in service in their professions. Going back to the veteran T. Thomas Fortune, who used to write for the New York Sun, he named a number of persons who are now practicing journalists, drawing respectable salaries.

Mr. Schuyler faced a splendid audience and gave a valuable history of the rise of the Negro press; while he discussed its problems, merits and defects. His background of service as syndicate writer, editor and contributor to many national journals had enabled him to speak with authority on the subject.

Just What Does It All Mean to Me?

That is the question that naturally comes to your mind when you think of or talk to your neighbors about the rather bewildering activities of the federal government in Washington.

Fragmentary news reports of congressional action or administration policies often are confusing, but if you will read William Bruckart's interpretative WASHINGTON DIGEST, which is published each week in this paper, you will know more about what all the moves on the capital checkerboard mean to you.

Through long service as a Washington correspondent, Mr. Bruckart is particularly well qualified for this particular job. He gives you an illuminating interpretation of what Congress is doing or is expected to do, and what is happening or is expected to happen in other departments of the government.

READ the Bruckart letter every week for an intelligent understanding of what is going on at the national capital.

PROMINENT universities have proved that about 25% of your fuel during the heating season goes for hot water when you use a furnace coil (evidence on request). Heat is necessary to raise the temperature of water and heat takes fuel.

The furnace coil was considered a satisfactory method of heating water when no better way was known. But today you can have a modern, automatic Electric Water Heater which gives you an abundant supply of hot water day and night. And at present low electric rates you will find it cheaper than less convenient and more hazardous methods. See the beautiful new Electric Water Heaters now on display.
